PROPERTY OVERVIEW

Guthrie Plaza is positioned with direct frontage to Division, one of the most highly trafficked intersections in Guthrie. Located directly across from Wal-Mart SuperCenter with a signaled entrance.

This center has long term tenants who some have been in place since the 1990s, which provides stability for any investor who is looking for a strong property with great returns, as well as 2 shadow anchors (Galleria Furniture and Walgreen) offering excellent foot traffic.

Guthrie is projected for significant growth in the coming years as we are seeing several developments along the North I-35 corridor with Guthrie in it's path.

This property is not only positioned with great visibility but it's also minutes away from the Turnpike that connects to Edmond and the OKC Metro.

Cricket Wireless was founded in March 1999 by Leap Wireless International. AT&T acquired Leap Wireless International in March 2014 and merged Cricket Wireless with Aio Wireless. Before AT&T's acquisition, the company had 4.5 million subscribers.

Cricket's first market was Chattanooga, Tennessee, in 1999 and through much of its early growth became known as a network focused on small, rural markets.

In September 2007, MetroPCS, Cricket Wireless's competing carrier at the time, announced a $5.3 billion bid to merge with Leap Wireless.^[6] Leap informally rejected the bid less than two weeks later. MetroPCS officially withdrew the bid less than two months later. In December 2007, Cricket acquired Hargray Communications Group's wireless telecommunications business.

In September 2008, Cricket and MetroPCS entered into a ten-year roaming agreement covering both companies' existing and future markets. The companies also entered into a spectrum exchange agreement covering licenses in certain markets. In November 2008, they launched "Premium Extended Coverage", a roaming partnership with 14 wireless companies. In August 2010, Cricket and Sprint signed a five-year wholesale agreement (MVNO) which allowed Cricket to utilize Sprint's nationwide 3G EVDO network in the United States.
